Delia Noblecilla

Director, Global Supply Chain Program
Management Office, Molson Coors

Delia Noblecilla is currently the Director of Global Supply Chain Program Management Office at Molson Coors, where she manages the long-range planning process for supply chain. She began her career in beer and supply chain 20-plus years ago in her home country, Perú. She started as an Industrial Engineer focusing in process improvement in the packaging area of the brewerie and “trying to get one more bottle out the door” was her motto. Since then, she has held multiple positions within operations before finding her passion of project work.

She loves to bring individuals from different areas of expertise, cultures and locations to create and execute plans and creatively problem solve challenges with the ultimate goal of bringing a tangible good that delights and brings value to end consumers.

When not at work, you can find her and husband Gabriel at swim meets cheering for their two teenage children.
